

Important Update Regarding Conference 2020

Postponed: November 23rd-24th, 2020

Dear PolyamQ Conference Community,

First, I want to thank each and every one of you for your collaboration and patience as the Board worked together to determine a contingency plan for our 2020 Conference.

Our number one priority is protecting the health and wellbeing of all Conference participants, as well as our larger communities.

After a thorough evaluation of all possible scenarios, the Board has decided that the Conference will be postponed until November 23rd and 24th, 2020. All accepted proposals will be carried forward to our new dates.

If social distancing measures continue through to November 23rd and 24th, then the Conference will be carried forward in an online format. Details of this decision will be released no later than four-weeks prior to the event.

In order to move forward with logistical preparations, we will be asking all authors of accepted proposals to confirm their ability to attend these new Conference dates. If you have already contacted our conference coordinator, Pedrom Nasiri (pnasiri@ucalgary.ca), there is no need to re-confirm your availability.

We look forward to the opportunity of sharing narratives of intimacy, weakness, resilience, community and strength in-person, on November 23rd and 24th, and thank you for your patience once more.

In community,

PolyamQ: Calgary's Queer & Polyamorous Community.
